Guide Description

AUTHOR NOTE: Acapulco is one of Mexico's best destination for families, with safe beaches, great simple food, and so many activities for visitors of all ages.

Day 1 - Acapulco

DAY NOTE: For the utmost in service and relaxation, the Mayan is one of Acapulco's most upscale and family-friendly resorts. The kid's water park alone is enough of a pull, with tons of slides and a lazy river, all kid-safe. A bit out of town and amid its own huge grounds, the Mayan is safe and beautifully kept up, with its own beach, pools, and great restaurants, too. Opt for the Grand Mayan over the Mayan Palace, for room size and modernity. Head into town on your first day in Acapulco for a glass-bottomed boat tour of the bay, and choose one that takes you out to Isla Roqueta, where there is a small zoo that's enjoyable. You may also pass over the sunken statue of the Virgin of Guadalupe. There are several beaches in the area that are perfect for families, including the Playa Majahua, or just enjoy the different options around the hotel. Dinner at Fersato's is always fun, with the incredible decor and great traditional fare that ranges from basic tacos to incredible seafood dishes.

Day 2 - Acapulco

DAY NOTE: Visit a piece of Acapulco's history at the Fuerte de San Diego, where extensive renovations have turned this former fort into a museum. There's plenty to interest everyone here, with exhibits on everything from the jaguar cults to the stories of the pirate attacks of the past. Castillo del Rey Leon is a particularly enjoyable beach club, with activities for vacationers of all ages and a nice restaurant. There's simple and delicious for the kids and traditional and spicy dishes for the adults at Pollo Giro.

Day 3 - Acapulco

DAY NOTE: You can spend the morning walking around downtown Acapulco, near the Zocalo, or central square. There's much to see here, with lots of locals going about their daily business amid the multitude of interesting small local businesses. If you are travelling with older children, the Swiss Divers offer a snorkeling tour in a safe area of the bay for a look at the underwater animal life. It's hard to concentrate on the food during dinner at La Granja with so much going on, including the little zoo, but its sure to be a hit with children.

Day 4 - Acapulco

DAY NOTE: Playa Caleta y Caletilla is another family-oriented beach, so head here or make the best use of the hotel beach for a game of volleyball or for some body surfing. The main can't-miss is the cliff divers at La Quebrada, a famous Acapulco tradition, which gets even more exciting at night but is breathtaking during the day, too, if everyone's getting too tired. A small fee gets a view from the observation deck and a beverage. Julio's may look simple based on decor, but the wide range and high quality of the food make this a great place for your last taste of Acapulco cooking.

1 Fersato's

DESCRIPTION: This restaurant is especially attractive for its high arches and cast iron, replicating the type of small plaza traditionally found in Mexican country haciendas (big estate houses favored by the landed gentry.) As one might expect, the food is similarly inspired. Everything from simple tacos de albañil (crunchy pork cracklings garnished with avocado, onion, tomato, coriander and chili peppers) to the delicious tampiqueña meat dish (a tender cut of beef fried or roasted,) accompanied by enchiladas (maize tortilla filled with chicken and garnished with a mole chili and chocolate spice sauce,) beans and totopos (fried maize tortillas,) and an oil fried golden taco are on the menu. 2 Mayan Palace Acapulco Golf Resort

OUR LOCAL EXPERT SAYS:

Golf is good and the gym is excellent with professional fitness programs and classes. The fake temascal (Aztec sweat house) offers a truly therapeutic experience but spa services are generally overpriced.

DESCRIPTION: This has the best water park for kids in town and some exceptional activities and shows(salsa bands, circus), depending on the season and who is in charge. The watery lobby with pillars makes a grand impression and the Mayan theme on the whole is a winner, if you can keep your cynicism at bay. Foreign guests love the sports bar area and the variety of foods in the differently-themed restaurants. However, you have wandered into package and time-share land here, which leaves you somewhat in limbo - in Acapulco ... but not really. Food is tasty and varied but rooms vary in quality, size and decor depending whether you are "Grand Mayan", or one of the other categories. Pre-planned outings are not bad, and on the whole, if you find a good price, this is fine for those who want to sit back and let someone else do the running. © NileGuide

Fort of San Diego

OUR LOCAL EXPERT SAYS:

Bring a bottle of water, come early and take your time to let everything sink in. Views are great all around so take a wander. Combine visit with the colorful Mask Museum which is round the corner. Good toilets, spacious, clean and cool.

DESCRIPTION: "La Fuerte," as it is referred to in town, is the main historical monument in Acapulco and the most important maritime fort along the Pacific coast. Acapulco's first claim to fame was for being the port for the Nao de China (also known as the Manila Galleon) that brought splendid goods from the Orient, which were then transferred to Veracruz and sent to Europe. Here you will be greeted by the carriage of William of Holland which made its way from Veracruz in the 1840s, replicas of galleons, fine silks, treasure chests and plentiful models. Visitors will also find pre-conquest history, with faces and tools from La Sabana river area, Mezcala faces for the dead, a Mexica altar, information on wall paintings from nearby Pie de la Cuesta and a general insight into Guerrero state's pre-Hispanic sites. Nautical fans will be in paradise with probes, hour glasses, sextants, compasses, hoists and marine astrolabes. These compete with military trappings, armor and shields, and delicate, ancient flags and standards. The displays are beautifully conceived, and attentive visitors will note how Mexican artists began to reproduce stylized decorations in their own crafts, with examples from Puebla's talavera pottery, ceramics from Tonalá, Jalisco, and lacquered furniture from Uruapan and Pátzcuaro, Michoacán. Other influences extend from dress (such as the gaudy, frilly China Poblana costume) to the spread of produce like rice, mangos, pepper and cinnamon. © NileGuide

DESCRIPTION: As its name suggests, the specialty of this restaurant is chicken cooked Sonoran style (a Northern Mexican state close to the US border). Thus the Charcoal grilled Chicken is accompanied by roasted onions and hand made tortillas, all garnished in a delicious Mexican sauce. Other recommended dishes are the chilorio (a Northern meat and chili dish) and quesadillas (folded maize tortillas filled with either meat, cheese or mushrooms inside.) Try one of the original root beers also from Sonora. The facilities are fairly simple, but include a parking lot, play area for children, and an ocean landscape that is quite beautiful to gaze out on. 1 Zócalo (El)

OUR LOCAL EXPERT SAYS:

The Cafe Astoria here is a great place to have a strong and bracing black Acapulco coffee, or even a breakfast (prices are fair) while you watch the square's goings on.

DESCRIPTION: The Zócalo was the heart of Spanish Acapulco, founded on December 13, 1521, when Fernando Chico sailed into Acapulco Bay, and remains the most traditional section of the entire city. The busy neighborhood's vital center is a pretty tree-lined plaza between the Church of Nuestra Señora de la Soledad and the bay front avenue, La Costera. The church, built only in 1930, is unusual in Mexico: onion-shaped twin towers covered in blue and yellow tiles resemble those of a Russian Orthodox church. The plaza's arcades contain restaurants and ice cream stores and if you explore the surrounding side streets you will find decent prices for souvenirs. The cruise ship terminal is within walking distance of the Zócalo and the sidewalks are frequently packed with passengers enjoying a day in port. Walk up the hill behind the church to La Quebrada and watch the cliff divers. © NileGuide

2 Swiss Divers Association

OUR LOCAL EXPERT SAYS:

Diving certification courses make an excellent active vacation in Acapulco.

DESCRIPTION: Longtime Acapulco scuba operator Swiss Divers Association offers novice divers and snorkelers the chance to gain experience in pool sessions or the shallow waters of Playa Caletilla and Isla Roqueta. More experienced divers visiting Mexico can choose from boat, wreck, and nitrox dives in deep Acapulco Bay or in the Pacific Ocean. Visibility varies daily but is usually from between 15 and 45 feet and sea life like octopus, turtles, stingrays, and dolphins are regularly spotted.

Boats sail in the morning and afternoon; one interesting dive visits the submerged bronze statue of the Virgin of the Seas in Boca Chica channel. The friendly staff takes your safety seriously and also speaks English, Spanish, and German. The company also rents, sells, and repairs diving equipment, and makes souvenir photos and videos of your dive. As you enter La Granja, you will find yourself under a great sized thatched roof, to one side they have a playground and in the back there is a small lake where games are organised such as boat races, or a contest to see who can cross the lake by hanging on a rope. Acapulco Snapshot

Local Info

Acapulco's first distinction – always a breath-taking sight upon arrival – is its deep horseshoe-shaped bay on the edge of the Pacific Ocean. The full beaches of golden sand are fringed with palms, pools, restaurants and hotels, and a jungle backdrop of green hills that stretch into the rugged Sierra Madre mountain range. This picture-perfect scenery is a still from a movie ... many of them, in fact, from the days of Johnny(Tarzan) Weismuller and Rita Hayworth to Elvis Presley and Sylvester Stallone. Its second distinction is its climate. Not known for their modesty, Acapulqueños(as the city's denizens are called), will say their "Acapulquito" has the best weather and swimming temperatures in the whole country. They are probably right. Acapulco's balmy delights first lead you to disrobe, coax you to letting your hair down and before you know it you'll be letting it all hang loose-- no doubt they have contributed to the resort's steamy reputation for carnality and hedonism. However, what no-one on this continent can beat Acapulco at(although Rio in Brazil has something of the ring, and Havana in Cuba once used to) is its name ... for glamour, romantic sunsets, Hollywood stars, romps on the beach, daring cliff divers, tropical seduction, the birth of disco, the wild antics of the jet-set, presidents, royalty and pop stars, all-night parties, and feasts for each of the senses. This is a two-edged sword for a port-town that has in fact been hosting outsiders and dealing with pirates(and other kinds of human sharks) for centuries, if you consider the days of the Manila Galleon, in the sixteenth century. Acapulco's allure is unique, but sometimes it is hard to live up to a larger-than-life reputation. People try however, and ooze charm and stories as tall as the drink you hopefully will be sipping. Unlike Cancún, whose population is largely a mix of folk from other states, there is a regional character here that is markedly feisty, exuberant, very proud, cheeky and downright wily. Acapulco is easy to reach, less than a four-hour drive from Mexico City, half-an-hour by plane from Juarez International airport and fairly well served with direct flights from destinations in the US. It is also a well-established port of call on cruise ship routes, and its stylish yacht club keeps sailboats from all over. It is now huge, divided into at least three major sections and travelling between them(usually by taxi) is one of the first issues a visitor will have to address. Its main income is from tourism, and it provides most of the income for the whole state of Guerrero and many local people, who have seen it all, speak a little English. Because proximity, and tradition, make Acapulco a magnet for the capital's working and service classes, especially in low season(summer holidays primarily but also Semana Santa), it is also one of the few resorts that genuinely caters to all budgets and most ages. Entertainment runs the whole gamut from tacky to whacky, and sordid to stylish, and you can eat and drink well for a song, as well as pay through the nose for something shriveled up and watered down. You need to be savvy – I don't recommend Acapulco for the guileless – and if you want to get a punch for your peso it certainly helps to speak Spanish and to have some patience. Harbor no illusions ... if you are a white, English-speaking foreigner wearing tourist-type clothes, it is inevitable the local folk will start thinking in dollars. Gone are the days when local beauties walked barefoot down from their shacks on the hillside to feed you fresh home-made tamales or tacos from baskets propped on their heads merely hoping for a glint of your appreciative blue eye and maybe a tip. But there is a genuine warmth and hospitality for the visitor who is open-minded and armed with a generous sense of humor. While the Golden Days are melting into myth, the Diamond Days – Acapulco's current phase – are now firmly entrenched. Named for Punta Diamante, the tiny peninsula that now holds a new Banyan Tree hotel, this kicked off when tax incentives at the end of the 90s persuaded investors to try out some luxury developments on and beyond the Carretera Escénica(the "Scenic Highway"). Fortunately there was also a noticeable refurbishment of the old town, Caleta, La Quebrada and the Zócalo and adjacent stretch of seafront – still my favorite part – in the last six years. But the major change has been the massive expansion along Revolcadero Beach, of mega-stores and shopping malls, some housing for locals, restaurants, a conference center, a few hotels, an entertainment center and colossal condominium buildings aiming for the wealthy Mexico City("chilango") market. As a result, Acapulco's tourism profile – already very varied – is changing every month. Only the last year has seen the opening of three landmark hotels(all listed here), while new restaurants and clubs pop up like proverbial mushrooms. Lively events spruce up the calendar year, from a tennis tournament to a string of fancy-dress pilgrimages, an arts festival in the old fort or a daring cliff diving spectacle as the human torch, or a fashion show or baby turtle release experience for children. Nightspots and discos update their floorshows with each new season, hotels bring in new entertainment to lure guests, the Philharmonic tries to make itself heard over the techno beat from the clubs, and efforts to bring in world-famous opera singers happily coincide with a rowdy sand sculpture competition. Keep your eye on this site for what is coming up in January and February 2011.

History

Imagine an unspoiled paradise on the coasts of the Pacific, where only a few animal species live, with the sun, the sea and the vegetation making up a green and ocher landscape. Thus was Acapulco Bay over 3000 years ago. The first inhabitants of this area were the Nahuas, a tribe that was a predecessor to the Aztecs, according to archaeological findings dating back to over 2000 years ago.

In 1521, Francisco Chico, by order of Hernán Cortés acting on behalf of the Spanish Crown, arrived in this area, the first foreigner ever to step on Mexican territory, and named it Santa Lucía. The newly founded city quickly became an important trading center between Asia and America, with ships constantly coming and going to and from the East, and which brought, among many other goods, spices into America. As a result of the economic boom, the population increased threefold and its wealth attracted the attention of legendary pirates such as Sir Francis Drake, Morgan and Cavendish.

In order to defend the port from the frequent pirate attacks, a castle was built: San Diego Fort, which would later fall prey to an earthquake in the 18th Century, and would be destroyed as a result. Acapulco is, after all, one of the most earthquake-prone areas in the country.

At the beginning of the 19th Century, King Charles IV declared Acapulco a Ciudad Oficial (official city) and it became an essential part of the Spanish Crown. In 1810, José María Morelos attacked and burnt down the city during the War of Independence.

Acapulco recovered its importance during the Gold Rush. Many of the ships stopped in the port on their way to Panama, and more than a few of the passengers were so taken by the natural beauty of its beaches that they decided to settle there.

In 1920, Acapulco started its voyage towards becoming an important tourist destination, with the visit of the Prince of Wales and future King Edward VIII. Acapulco's charm had captivated the royalty and they soon recommended the place all around Europe. The idea to create a hotel and trading infrastructure came from a Texan businessman named Pullen, responsible for the construction of what is now known as Old Acapulco. Years later, President Miguel Alemán radically transformed the port, installing electricity, drainage systems, pavements, and building the first road from Mexico DF to the port, which brought much more tourism to the state of Guerrero.

The economy grew and foreign investment increased with it. The year 1950 marked the beginning of the Golden Age of Acapulco. It became the "in" place among millionaires and Hollywood stars. Elizabeth Taylor chose Acapulco for one of her weddings; Sinatra, Eddie Fisher, John F. Kennedy and Brigitte Bardot were regular faces on Acapulco's beaches.

During the 1960s and 1970s, new hotel resorts were built, and accommodation and transport were made cheaper. It was no longer necessary to be a millionaire to spend a holiday in Acapulco, the foreign and Mexican middle class could now afford to travel to the beautiful city.

During the 1990s, the road known as the Ruta del Sol was built, crossing the mountains between Mexico City and Acapulco. The journey only takes about three and a half hours, making Acapulco a favorite weekend destination for Mexico City inhabitants.

Acapulco is still expanding and its infrastructures constantly improving with ever-growing foreign investment. No doubt it is worth visiting this Mexican destination, where the landscape and sunset are still the same as they were when Nahuas admired them from the deserted beaches so many years ago.

Hotel Insights

If the port of Acapulco de Juárez, in the state of Guerrero, is one of the favorite places among royalty and celebrities, imagine the variety in terms of entertainment the city has to offer its visitors! Since the early 1960s, Acapulco has been a favorite tourist destination among both Mexicans and foreigners. The tourist boom brought hotel investors to the bay to transform the area entirely, providing a wide range of services and prices.

Acapulco has one of the best hotel infrastructures, with something for everyone, whatever your budget. The road known as Ruta del Sol, crosses the mountains into Mexico City. The journey between the two cities is only three and half hours, and has made Acapulco a favorite weekend destination among Mexico City's inhabitants. For this very reason, Acapulco continues to grow and improve in order to provide all its visitors with everything they might need, want or enjoy. Acapulco continues to grow as a top Mexican destination, without spoiling, needless to say, the natural beauty of the Mexican Sierra Maestra.

Punta Diamante

The list of luxury hotels is lead by the Acapulco Princess, which includes a top Golf Course as part of the services it offers. The Hotel Camino Real, located in the Puerto Marqués, far away from the busy streets of the center in a very exclusive area, is a real experience for its guests. Hotel Las Brisas and Hotel Mayan Palace are two other good options for guests staying in near the Punta Diamante.

Golden Zone (Zona Dorada)

For those who are after luxury and comfort, the best options are Hotel Elcano, Fiesta Americana, the Crowne Plaza Hotel and Park Royal. All of these offer first class services, bilingual staff, and are very near the most "chic" beaches in the bay. Other first class hotels include in the area include the Emporio Acapulco, Hotel El Presidente and Maris.

There is yet another option in terms of accommodation: what are known as hoteles económicos, and rightly so, are often compared to places in Waikiki in Hawaii. These hotels offer basic services and facilities, but are perfect for those who only want somewhere to sleep and some hot water. Some of these economical hotels include the Fiesta Inn.

For those of you who are just happy with somewhere clean to sleep and hot water, the "standard" hotels offer basic services at very reasonable prices, whatever your budget. So don't miss out on coming to Acapulco; if you are on a tight budget, stay at the Hotel Acapulco Malibú, or Hotel Tortuga located on the Costera Miguel Alemán, at the center of all the fun and on one of the best beaches; Bali Hai is another excellent option.

Traditional Zone (Zona Tradicional)

Another option is simply to stay in what are known as First Class hotels, like Hotel Boca Chica, very close to the Beaches of Caleta and Caletilla, one of the most traditional beaches for decades. Near the Papagayo Park, in the shopping area, is the Hotel Parador del Sol, the Pierre Marques, and Playa Suites Acapulco, among many others.

If you are looking for one of the hoteles económicos in Acapulco, try the Hotel Majestic. Situated on a beach which you are bound to have seen in more than one

Restaurants Insights

As is the case with all the Mexican beach destinations where international tourism has flourished, Acapulco has a great number of restaurants, bars and discotheques, each one with a style of its own, offering special dishes and special features which make them worthy of recommendation.

There are restaurants located all along the hotel area, and also in the city center. The latter tend to be more reasonably priced, and mostly specialize in seafood or local cuisine. In the province of Guerrero, the traditional food is rather hot and spicy. Take this into account when ordering food: don't overdo it.

Golden Zone(Zona Dorada)

Variety is the spice of life, or so the Spanish saying(en la variedad está el gusto) goes, and in Acapulco Bay this has been taken very seriously. Taking advantage of tourists' taste for nightlife, the number of discotheques and bars in the bay seems to increase by the day. Popular ones around town include: Baby'O, the legendary Hard Rock Café Acapulco, and its neighbor Planet Hollywood Acapulco. At most of the nightclubs, there is a flat fee upon entry, and thereafter one can drink as much as one wants all night long. The most exclusive discos are in the area known as Las Brisas.

If you prefer slightly quieter places, stop by one of the several piano bars along the coast, like Café del Pacífico, which is an intimately lit romantic hangout. Dino's and Villa Fiore are other fine restaurants that serves Italian cuisine.

Perhaps you would prefer to taste something a little more local? Excellent places for Mexican food include El Zorrito's, or if you are in town for some fine seafood, La Langosta Loca and Pipo's have a wide variety of dishes to please your palate.

If fast food is more your thing, you will find what you are after at places, like California, El Fogón, Shakeys Pizza and Subway.

Punta Diamante

A great place to go dancing is the Palladium or Carlos'n' Charlie's, or you want to simply listen to some great tunes, try Pepe's, a romantic piano bar. If you would rather have an Italian experience, book a table at Restaurante Casanova, which is one of the city's best restaurants. Culinary delicacies all the way from Japan are served at the elegant Suntory and San& Town.

For breakfast, lunch or dinner, Acapulco has an enormous quantity of options to choose from, no matter the occasion, your food preferences or your budget. When it comes to international cuisine restaurants, check out Madeiras, on Calle Coyuca 22. Señor Frogs has a glorious salad and cold meat menu. If you want authentic Mexican, try Los Rancheros.

Traditional Zone(Zona Tradicional)

La Perla is one of Acapulco's best and is conveniently located inside the Hotel Mirador. Why not take advantage of being right next to the sea and try some local seafood at restaurants such as, El Amigo Miguel. For a quick meal on-the-go, Tio Alex is a great choice.

Nightlife Insights

Nature gave "the Pearl of the Pacific" a remarkable number of some of the most stunning beaches in the planet. The natural beauty makes Acapulco perfect for those visitors who are after the pleasures of the sun and the sea, and have been searching for the perfect sand and water to relax in, enjoy or play sports in.

In Acapulco there is simply no time to get bored. The price of attractions and entertainment varies, but are never too expensive. If you prefer busy streets and action in general, stick to the center; if you would rather relax on a quiet beach, the part of the Bay known as Las Brisas is your best bet.

Beaches

All the beaches in Acapulco are open to the public, including those near the most exclusive hotel resorts. The following beaches are particularly worth visiting: Barra Vieja, enormous in length Laguna de Tres Palos, which eventually leads to the Pacific; the Beaches of Caleta and Caletilla in old Acapulco and a favorite among the locals; Magic Marine World, Roqueta Island, La Angosta, Playa Condesa and the Laguna de Coyuca. La Isla Roqueta is perfect for snorkelling or windsurfing. While still on the subject of beaches, it's necessary to mention the Beaches of Hornos and Hornitos: a swimmer's paradise; and Icacos Beach, one of the finest places in Acapulco. Playa Pie de la Cuesta is the ideal place to sit and watch the sunset; what you see on the postcards is nothing compared to the magical experience of seeing it live. Surfers find its waters a true paradise. The waves of Port Marqués Bay are not particularly swimmer-friendly, but many people prefer them for water sports. At El Revolucionero you have the chance to ride a horse along the shore and check out stunning views. Other beaches which are well worth visiting include Tamarindos Beach and Tlacopanocha.

Sailing

Sailing in a yacht is one of the favorite activities among tourists who visit the Bay. Although the sea is not entirely calm and one requires some previous experience or simply natural talent to sail, fishing certainly poses no danger. Why not take your rod? You could catch anything from barracudas to sharks. There are special fishing tours you can book: the men in charge of the boats know where to find what you are after, and with their advice and suggestions, your experience is bound to be a success.

Golf

Acapulco is also excellent for playing golf, with two very good golf courses, one of which is at the Fairmont Acapulco Princess, and the other at Pierre Marqués Golf Course, both with 18 holes. There are also several hotels that have tennis courts such as the Hyatt Hotel.

Historical Sights

If you fancy a walk, visit some of the many arts and crafts shops, where a great amount of establishments specialize in Taxco silver and traditional arts and crafts from the Guerrero province. On Sundays, enjoy the folk music and try something special to eat at the Acapulco Garden Club. La Catedral is a chance to look into the history of Acapulco and the Acapulco International Convention Center is famous for the amount of quality shows that run year after year here, particularly concerts from the Acapulco Symphony Orchestra and music festivals. The Acapulco Festival is the world's largest since 1991 and stays current every time with large surprises.

Scenic Walks

During your visit, don't forget to go for a walk along La Quebrada, where, for decades, divers have tried their luck and put their lives at risk by diving from a great height to a narrow and dangerous entry into the Pacific Ocean, from a mountain peak. Yet another of the old attractions of Acapulco. The landscape from up here is beautiful and there is a wide selection of arts and crafts shops and traditional restaurants.

Family Fun

Acapulco offers entertainment for everyone, whatever age, tastes or interests. For the little ones, stop at Magic Marine World or at the CICI, famous slides and water games, as well as all sorts of trained sea animals.

Things to Do Insights

Traditional Acapulco

The traditional area of Acapulco is something you simply cannot miss. It was here that the port became an international tourist destination. So because of this we highly recommend the following tour, which will take the entire day, but will be a truly unforgettable experience.

To start with a deliciously nutritious breakfast, stop at 100% Natural restaurant, where dishes are light and exquisite. Afterwards, you only need to cross the street to be at the Beaches of Caleta and Caletilla. These are very popular; they're usually the busiest areas due to their warm, calm waters. Renting a small pedal boat or a jet ski is a great idea. Then, visit Magic Marine World aquarium, located in the centre of both bays.

Once you have toured the aquarium, and enjoyed the pools and slides, for a bite to eat, check out a glass-bottomed boat, which you'll find at the docks. The boatmen feed the fish, so you can see them eating right below your feet. Another attraction is a visit to the Capilla Submarina (Underwater Chapel), which consists of an impressive statue of the Virgen de Guadalupe, as the Queen of the Sea. You will also hear stories about giant manta rays, mermaids and many others that make up a part of the tour and add interest to the trip. Finally, you arrive at Roqueta Island, where you can grab a bite at Palao restaurant. It offers beautifully seasoned seafood and first-class service.

After savoring delightful food, you might want to stop by the Aca-Zoo on this island, which is not a bad idea, but to get there you will need to climb a few little hills to admire the animals in their natural habitat. After finishing this tour you can take advantage of a dip in a part of the ocean with a soft surf and fine sand. Much later, the conductor of the boat that has been rented will return you to your point of departure.

Sunsets in Acapulco are famous. Caleta Beach is one of the best places to see them, with a drink in your hand and a trio singing next to you. This can be a truly unforgettable experience. To put an end to a perfect day, visit the famous Quebrada show. We suggest seeing the 8:30p show because the torchlit diving is very impressive. Next, maybe finish off with a romantic dinner at La Perla restaurant, where you can enjoy traditional Mexican music in a stunning setting. If you are still up for more after your meal, check out a disco. Or you can go dancing on one of the many boats featuring live music, with the starry sky above and the natural sound of the waves surrounding you, we recommend the Bonanza Yacht. It also offers Hawaiian dance shows and a buffet supper included in the admission price.

Pie de La Cuesta Tour

A complete tour of this area requires the use of a car. Renting a car may be the best option: taxis could turn out to be pretty expensive. As you start making your way down the road, you will soon have a view of the sea beside you. This is where the tour starts.

Pie de la Cuesta is located some 6 miles from the center of Acapulco; along the way you will come across several cozy seafood restaurants where you grab breakfast, although a stop at the Tres Marias restaurant, where you will get a taste of the true flavors of the coast is highly recommended. The seafood is caught in the early morning hours so it is always served as fresh as possible. The great attraction of this area is that by simply crossing a narrow street, you will find yourself overlooking spectacular views of either the sea or the lagoon.

On the side of the lagoon, you have the chance to practice a never-ending list of water sports, such as water-skiing, parachuting, jet skiing, sailing and boat racing. However, the real charm of this place is its sunsets, which have given these beaches worldwide fame.

Other activities to keep you occupied on the beach are sports like, volleyball, football, horse-riding, 4-wheeled bikes, and above all, soaking in the Acapulco sun. Hotel Parador del Sol is another excellent option to spend the day at, as the admission price includes the use of all the facilities, that is, the pool, sun-decks, areas for volleyball and football, a buffet, and more.

Very nearby, there's a small port next to the lagoon, which organizes a Jungle Tour. This is a wonderful chance to go on a two-hour boat tour, where you will get to see a small isle inhabited by all sorts of bird species. If you are so lucky as to visit it in the winter, you will be able to see the ducks who have migrated from Canada to the warm waters of Acapulco. But it is not only birds you will have the chance to see here; this is also a great fishing area which provides Acapulco restaurants with most of their fish. This is a truly beautiful tour which is well worth spending some time on while you enjoy being in direct contact with nature.

If you're traveling with children, Pie de la Cuesta also offers an aquatic amusement park, Castillo del Rey León with all sorts of water activities, perfect for the little ones. It has swimming pools, slides, and games which will provide the perfect entertainment for kids and adults alike.

After such a busy day, how about dinner at El Cabrito restaurant? Located on the Costera Dorada, its spacious terrace is the perfect setting for a relaxed and enjoyable evening. Later, enjoy international music at the discos like El Alebrije or Andrómedas.

Diamante Area

The Diamante Area in Acapulco is the newest part in terms of building and development. This is where the luxury hotels and accommodation are to be found. However, there are also some of the most beautiful beaches and places to visit in this area. Here is a guide to the most interesting spots in Diamante.

Start the day with a visit to the Capilla de la Paz (Chapel of Peace), a church of remarkable beauty located at the top of a hill. From here, you can see the whole bay and port of Acapulco—time to get out your cameras! You will also see the most exclusive residential area in town, Hotel Las Brisas, where national and international artists and several millionaires live. If you take a taxi, he or she will be able to show you a few of them.

Continue the tour by stopping off at Los Pavorrales restaurant, where a delicious Mexican breakfast is waiting for you. You can also take the opportunity to go for a ride on the Laguna de Tres Palos, either on a boat or a jet ski, which you can rent. Or simply go for a swim in the pool.

For lunch, stop by Bahía de Puerto Marqués, where there is a wide variety of seafood restaurants offering delicious food at very reasonable prices. We suggest the Cevichería Linda, a place where the variety of cocktails is sure to please the palate.

Now that you're in this bay, you may want to go water-skiing, snorkeling, or rent a jet-ski, which will enable you to reach the most exclusive and private beaches. Pichilingue An excellent place for lunch amongst restaurants located in La Barra, where the Laguna de Tres Palos and the Revolcadero Beach come together to form a beautiful landscape. Here you can go horseriding, as well as swim in the lagoon. It is not advisable to swim in the sea, as the waves can be strong and dangerous. It is, however, possible to go on a panga, a small row-boat, which will give you the chance to get to know the lagoon canals, as well as see all sorts of species of birds in their natural habitat, and picturesque fishing villages.

On your way back, don't miss the chance to visit the Gran Turismo hotels, such as Acapulco Princess, Mayan Palace and Pierre Marqués, with wonderful facilities of all sorts. You can stop off at any of these, and enjoy a drink at their lobby bars, with live music, a distinguished ambience and excellent service. Most of the guests at these hotels are foreign tourists.

These hotels also have a large selection of boutiques, offering exclusively designed shoes and accessories which are bound to give you that elegant and sophisticated touch. To end the day, how about a fun night at the disco? Palladium and Pepe's are in the same area and provide splendid quality and service.

TOUR OF THE REGION

The folklore of Guerrero is very varied and of great interest for anybody who comes to visit Acapulco. It's highly recommended to do this tour on a Thursday, as this is the day when most restaurants prepare the most traditional dishes from the area.

The first place you should visit is the Mercado del Campesino, where you will find unique products, not only from Acapulco, but also from all over the region. If you arrive between 8 and 9 in the morning you stand a better chance of purchasing the best products. Although it is small, each of its stalls provides plenty of handicrafts and a wide variety of other objects.

The Fuerte de San Diego museum is another must for soaking in the culture. An impressive Colonial building, it houses pieces of great value which have been found by archaeologists over the years in Acapulco and surrounding areas.

For more archeology, you could go to the Centro Cultural de Acapulco, although here the exhibition is smaller and the objects are of a later date. Perhaps after visiting these museums, you might feel like indulging in a different sort of activity. Why not visit Playas Hornos y Hornitos and Tamarindos, where you can spend the rest of the morning playing water sports and watching the fishermen at work?

If you prefer a more touristy and international atmosphere, try Playa Condesa, a very popular beach, due to its beauty and entertainment facilities.

When hunger strikes, we recommend you go to Los Cazadores restaurant, famous for its Pozole Verde, the local dish par excellence. This is not only worth going to for the excellent food, but it also gives you the chance to see the variety show staged here, so you can easily spend the afternoon here in its festive atmosphere. Another choice could be Los Rancheros restaurant, which, despite not offering a show, does have a terrace with views of the bay, where you can spend a pleasant time listening to the music and the sound of the sea.

Towards the end of the evening, visit the Parque Papagayo, a fair with dolly mollies, Mexican snacks and games. Kids and adults alike will find this place charming and fun.

Round it all off by going to Noche Mexicana Centro de Convenciones, where there is traditional music and dancing, shows, and also the chance to savor an exquisite meal.

Travel Tips

Getting There:

By Air:

The Juan N. Alvarez International Airport perches 22.5 kilometers(14 miles) southeast of downtown. Recent major renovations to its terminal, including more restaurants, have made it more visitor-happy.

Juan N. Alvarez International Airport(ACA)+52 744 466 9446<http://www.oma.bz/>

Its runways are frequented by major airlines such as:

Aeromexico(+1 800 237 6639/<http://www.aeromexico.com>) American Airlines(+1 800 433 7300/<http://www.aa.com>) Continental(+1 800 525 0280/<http://www.continental.com>) Mexicana(+1 800 531 7921/<http://www.mexicana.com>) US Airways(+1 800 428 4322/<http://www.usairways.com>)

Private taxis are banned from ferrying passengers from the airport so look for the Transportes Terrestres booths near the baggage claim area. Shared vans average USD10, while taxis range from USD18-USD50. Rides into town take 25-30 minutes.

Rental car companies include:

Alamo(+1 327 9633/ <http://www.alamo.com>) Avis(+1 800 831 2847/<http://www.avis.com>) Budget(+1 800 527 0700/<http://www.budget.com>) Galgo(+52 744 484 3066) Hertz(+1 800 654 3131/<http://www.hertz.com>)

By Bus:

The Central Camionera Station, north of downtown, is serviced by two major bus lines: Estrella de Oro(+52 744 485 9360) and Estrella Blanca(+52 744 469 2028). Both have air-conditioned buses and provide almost hourly service to Mexico City.

By Car:

Highway 95, a four-to-six lane toll highway, takes 3.5 hours from Mexico City and costs USD50. If time is not a factor but you are looking to save money Highway 95 D, a route that parallels Highway 95, is free but takes six hours from Mexico City due to its excess of continuous curves. Highway 200 wanders into Acapulco from both the north and south. Be careful when driving from the south for it has a history of robberies.

Getting Around Town:

Acapulco sports an extremely efficient bus system. Riders can choose from either its new line of pastel colored buses(USD.40) or its noticeably old school buses(USD.35). Covered bus stops, complete with posted route maps, line the Costera(Acapulco's main hotel/restaurant strip) making buses accessible from almost every street corner. Buses operate from 5A-11P daily.

Taxis are abundant and easy to find. The VW bug cabs are cheaper than the more contemporary"sitio" taxis averaging between USD2-USD10 as compared to USD4-USD12. If you hail a hotel taxi they generally charge three times higher. Because taxi competition is fierce each cab attempts to gain an edge by lavishly decorating their cars with elaborate neon lights so don't be surprised to be picked up by something that resembles a vehicular Liberace. Some of the more prominent upscale cab companies include:

Sitio Escudero:(+52 744 484 0250) Sitio Emancipacion(+52 744 484 7300) Sitio 54 Acapulco Plaza(+52 744 486 2461)

Because of Acapulco's sprawl having a car is handy, but not necessary due to its bus system. If you do drive be aware that parking is tight and is completely banned from the Costera. Street names and numbers are difficult to spot so have a good idea of where you going prior to driving.

Acapulco is not conducive for walking, unless you plan on never leaving the Hotel Zone.
