Guide Description

AUTHOR NOTE: Why restrict yourself to one set of mountains, how about trying two? Deer Valley Resort and Park City Mountain Resort are two of the finest areas around, however if you snowboard you won't be able to board at Deer Valley, so keep that in mind. The Lodge at the Mountain Village is a great headquarters for the weekend and will provide you with a good hearty breakfast before you hit hit slopes. When you are off the slopes eat at awesome restaurants like Chimayo and Claim Jumper.

Itinerary Overview

Day 1 - Park City

DAY NOTE: This is a non stop ski weekend, and you had better be ready because it will be intense. The Lodge at the Mountain Village is a great place to stay for the weekend, they have big rooms to accommodate the whole family for the weekend. Park City Mountain Resort here you come. This is the largest resort in the area and one of the best, don't you remember the 02 Olympics? Pack your own lunch or head down to grab a bite to eat the choice is yours. When you finally pull yourself off the mountain go home and grab a shower before you fill up at Claim-Jumper, you had better come hungry or you will be taking home leftovers, and I mean lots of them.

Park City Mountain Resort

3300 acres of assorted terrain in the heart of Park City

Claim-Jumper Steakhouse

Park City's favorite steak house

Day 2 - Park City

DAY NOTE: You may be tired but you have a whole new mountain to conquer, Deer Valley Resort will test your skiing abilities, and leave you with a smile on your face. Before you head out grab a bite to eat at the Lodge and be on your way. This is a refined resort with valets and porters to boot so be prepared to be pampered and powdered all day. For lunch Goldner Hirsch Restaurant is a good choice where you can warm up by a wood burning fireplace and dine on chicken breast, goat cheese or a whole rack of lamb, or your leftovers from Claim-Jumper. When the mountain says no more head home grab a shower and head out to Chimayo for a rustic atmosphere that has amazing foods. Stuffed salmon, tortilla soup, goat cheese rellenos and margaritas so good they have their own name Chimayo Margaritas.

1 Park City Mountain Resort

OUR LOCAL EXPERT SAYS:

To get the most out of Park City Mountain Resort, check out the numerous offerings of its extensive ski school.

DESCRIPTION: Park City Mountain Resort garnered international acclaim as the primary ski and snowboard venue for the Salt Lake 2002 Winter Olympics. A large-scale resort, this offers a wide range of terrain, from novice-friendly, broad and flat trails to steep, rolling groomers, and steeper yet, tree-line chutes. In addition to the varied terrain, PCMR has a wide host of lodges, restaurants, hotels, shops, rental options, and bars -making it a perfect whole-family destination. Well maintained and outfitted, this resort is nonetheless more accessible, price-wise, than Deer Valley.

Originally opened in 1963, the Park City Mountain Resort also offers great summer activities including an alpine slide, coaster, and zip lines. During the December through March ski season, the Olympic-sized snowboard half-pipe is the most popular slope on the mountain. The Canyons and Deer Valley Resort are also located in Park City, but the PCMR is the largest and first of the Park City ski areas. © NileGuide

DESCRIPTION: Claim-Jumper Steakhouse has moved from old Park City Hotel to its new location in Heber City. While a few menu items, such as the baked Idaho mushrooms, satisfy vegetarian taste buds, most diners come here for the massive portions of meat. Top sirloin, buffalo T-bone and king crab remain favorites, as does the rack of baby back ribs. All dinners include salad, potatoes and bread, and a full liquor menu is available. © wcities.com

1 Deer Valley Resort

OUR LOCAL EXPERT SAYS:

Arrive prepared to be pampered.

DESCRIPTION: Of Park City's three resorts, Deer Valley is certainly the "poshest" in every aspect, with its several on-premises restaurants and lodges winning national -and international- awards for excellence. Beyond the fine cuisine and luxurious accommodations, this mountain specializes in service -even on the slopes. The resort has six different mountains, 3,000 vertical feet, and 2,026 acres of skiable terrain. Yes, it is a ski hill, but don't worry; Deer Valley's groomers create some of the most velvety corduroy imaginable. Guests are greeted by staff, who wait to carry skis to the hill. They'll even put on your boots if you ask. Private and group lessons are available. No snowboarding allowed is allowed at Deer Valley.

During the summer, the the resort offers some excellent lift- and self-served mountain biking trails. With an elevation reaching almost 9,600 feet, these slopes offer a great reprieve from the sometimes stifling summer heat in the valleys below. © NileGuide

Park City Snapshot

Local Info

Located high in the Wasatch Mountains, Park City has always stood apart from the rest of Utah. While Salt Lake City was founded to be the new Mormon Zion, Park City grew up in the gritty business of mining. Park City's mountain town layout and liberated lifestyle have always contrasted with greater Utah's gridded streets and conservative culture. And though Salt Lake has greatly adapted and grown into the modern world, Park City has always maintained a flavor distinct from traditional Utah, drawing from its abundant natural beauty, recreational opportunities, and mountain culture.

Today Park City is world-famous as a ski destination, made so by its three world-class resorts, Park City, The Canyons, and Deer Valley. Each with its own flavor, these ski areas cater to visitors (and residents!) of all ski abilities and leisure tastes. Closely behind its snow sport fame comes its reputation as an incredible mountain biking town. Buffed trails meander over grassy foothills around the valley for cross-country riders; steep, lift-served downhill courses serve to challenge bikers at the ski resorts.

And in any season, Park City's "city" offers an enormous and condensed amount of cultural and culinary points of interest for any kind of visitor. Home to the Sundance Film Festival, Park City has been visited by nearly every silver screen celebrity during this January event. Whether you want to dine at a world-ranked restaurant or grab a burger at a brew pub, partake in an art stroll or catch an outdoor concert, Park City has you covered. And if you happen to have a bit too much to drink-or don't want to bother with parking- you may simply ride any of the free Park City shuttle buses.

Orientation-wise, Park City's Main Street can really be considered the town center. Lining this passageway is a huge representation of the town's galleries, eateries, and boutique shops. This long, narrow road, though open to vehicles, is much better suited to pedestrians than cars. If visiting this area, park in any of the lots just off Main Street and stroll around.

To the north (and near I-80) is Kimball Junction. Quite removed from the center of Park City, Kimball Junction serves Summit County with larger shops and venues requiring of more space to operate. Here you'll find the famous Tanger Outlets and other, larger box-type stores as well as some modern restaurants.

The three resorts, Deer Valley, The Canyons, and Park City Mountain Resort, function nearly as their own cities, each with restaurants, shops, and equipment rental opportunities. Of the three, The Canyons is located the farthest to the north, between Park City and Kimball Junction. Park City Mountain Resort is situated almost literally off Park City's Main Street. And Deer valley finds itself on the southeastern edge of town.

When planning your visit to Park City, don't consider yourself restricted to winter! This area is happy to host during any season, and is typically less crowded during the summer months. But be sure to book lodging well ahead of time to ensure the right rooms at the right price.

History

Mining Roots

Although it is one of the few cities in Utah not associated with Mormonism, even Park City has been influenced by Brigham Young's flock. In this case, the mining boom that was occurring in other western states was delayed by a Mormon lack of interest in precious minerals. It wasn't until 1868 that valuable metals were found in the hills around what would become Park City. Soldiers from nearby areas in charge of protecting the mail route discovered the first bits of silver in October of 1868.

Called "Parley's Park City" in 1872, the name was soon shortened to its current name. The Flagstaff Mine was the first to export ore from the area, and the Ontario Mine was sold to George Hurst and partners for $27,000 and eventually made over $50 million. Over the next few decades, even as silver prices fluctuated, the town's population boomed and reached almost 10,000 in 1898. In June of that same year, a fire ravaged the city burning three quarters of the town and leaving many homeless.

The rich deposits allowed new companies to form until, all too soon, disaster struck again. In July of 1902, an explosion in the Daly West Mine caused by underground dynamite killed 34 men. This led to safety concerns causing a state law to be enacted forbidding the storage of large quantities of explosives underground. The health of miners was put at risk not only by dynamite, but also because of the nature of the job itself. After the Miners Hospital was built in 1904, 6,000 miners were treated for silicosis, caused by breathing in crystalline silica dust, in the first year.

Origins of Sporting & Prohibition

The winter sports aspect of Park City was integrally related to the mining community. It the late 19th century, miners used a form of snowshoe to get to the mines. But soon it expanded from merely a means of transport to a form of recreation. As World War I and other factors led to a depression in the mining industry, winter sports began to gain a hold in the area. Workers took mining trains to the top of hills and skied to the bottom.

Although Prohibition was in full effect throughout the 1920s and into the 1930s, getting alcohol in Park City was never a problem. In fact, it is said that in the 27 bars in Park City in 1921, all of them served alcohol.

Park City as a Destination

During the Great Depression, mining prices began to decrease and so did the mining industry in Park City. Skiing had begun to pick up in the late 1940s with the first lift at Snow Park (now Deer Valley Resort). But by the 1950s, Park City was described as a ghost town. Then came a federal loan from the Area Redevelopment Agency in 1963 which relaunched Park City into the winter sports scene. Using this loan, Treasure Mountain Resort was created. An instant success, almost 50,000 skiers visited Treasure Mountain Resort in its first year. In 1965, the Skier's Subway was introduced to add the mining flavor into the new skiing town. This lift allowed skiers to travel in a modified mining trolley underground and then climbed on a old mine elevator to get to the top of the mountain. However, skiers were unimpressed and it was too slow and soon closed.

In 1968, what is now known as The Canyons but what was originally called Park West Ski opened. In the 1970s, Park City made an effort to be known not only for great skiing, but also for the arts. Festivals, the Kimball Art Center, and a new public library all added to the atmosphere of change.

Deer Valley Resort, often named as one of the best ski resorts in the world, opened in 1981. That same year was the inception of the festival that has become the Sundance Film Festival. Major ski competitions began to use the area after a North American record was set for spectators during the 1985 World Cup ski race in the area. Salt Lake City hosted the 2002 Winter Olympic Games. Over 40% of the events were held in the area surrounding Park City and it cemented its worldwide recognition as a top class ski resort.

Today, Park City is a haven for both sports and the arts. Historic Main Street is a picturesque area of town has been listed in the National Register of Historic Places, the Sundance Film Festival is one of the most well respected and recognized film festival worldwide, and Park City continues to be a world class skiing, snowboarding, and general sporting destination in both the winter and summer months.

Hotel Insights

Whether you are looking to mingle with the celebrities that every year make their way to Park City or are looking to save money on accommodations, Park City is sure to have a place to suit your needs.

Main Street

Definitely the center of nightlife and shopping in Park City, Main Street is a convenient and fun place to stay. The area around Main Street has diverse offerings, from dormitory style budget beds to villas. Main Street itself is home to both Marriott's Summit Watch and Treasure Mountain Inn. Both these hotels are great for accommodating large groups of people, with multiple-room villas and condos available. The Washington School Inn is a converted schoolhouse bed and breakfast with a personal touch.

There are also a number of places to stay a little farther off Main Street but still within easy walking distance. Chateau Apres Lodge is right near the lifts at Park City Mountain Resort. Although standards rooms are available, dorm-style accommodations are offered, attracting a number of younger people. In this same area is also Marriott's Mountainside which also have a free bus service to main street and is a ski-in ski-out facility.

Prospector Square

The other main center at Park City is located at Prospector Square, just off Kearns Boulevard. There are a variety of sleeping options in this area of town. Marriott Park City is full of convenience with free shuttle buses to Main Street and the ski resorts. If you are looking for something with a rustic feel but with all the amenities of home, check out Park Plaza. With an indoor swimming pool for year-round fun, kitchens with appliances, and fireplaces in the room, there seems little need to even leave the hotel! Also in the Prospector Square area is the Park Regency with a similarly rustic feel. Choose from one to two bedroom suites and take advantage of the airport and ski shuttle buses.

Other Areas

If you are looking to stay near Utah Olympic Park or the Tanger Outlet Center, there are a variety of chain hotels near Kimball Junction. The Best Western Landmark Inn and Hampton Inn& Suites Park City are both located on North Landmark Drive and provide all the amenities one can expect from these chains. Just down the street is also the Holiday Inn Express Park City with an oversized whirlpool and a breakfast buffet.

Also in this area, but located just south in Snyderville, are the Canyons which has a host of hotels great for access to the ski hills. At the height of luxury is the Canyons Grand Summit Hotel with balconies, fireplaces, and great views.

South of the Main Street section of town is Deer Valley Resort where the world-renowned Lodges at Deer Valley provide convenient access to the slopes. Even further south is the Stein Eriksen Lodge which has access to Deer Valley and whose lobby pays homage to the Norwegian style of architecture. The Goldener Hirsch Inn has a more intimate feel and each room has a different theme.

The areas surrounding Park City also have some great choices for accommodations. For those looking for a bit of distance from the hustle and bustle of Park City itself, Heber City and Midway offer great choices. The Homestead Resort is a community unto itself with natural mineral springs, golf, and horseback riding. On the opposite side of the spectrum is the small bed and breakfast, the Blue Boar Inn. Whether you are looking for a bed and breakfast style, or a chalet, the Inn on the Creek has you covered.

With a range of locations, prices, and services, Park City and its surrounding areas are sure to provide the perfect place to rest.

Restaurants Insights

Dining in Park City can range from being a cosmopolitan experience to a jeans-and-sweatshirt affair, with over a hundred bars and restaurants to choose from.

Main Street

The main thoroughfare running through downtown is Main Street, where the highest concentration of restaurants can be found. The oldest of these is Red Banjo Pizza Parlour, which has been family owned and operated since 1962. You can't miss the building- it is bright red with white trim, and patrons can enjoy fresh hand-tossed pizzas whole or by the slice on the second-story deck overlooking the street. Another "come as you are" establishment is Copper Creek Pub & Grub, where you can play a game of pool or watch the game. If you're really hungry, try their famous "Chubby Melt" - a half-pound of ground chuck patty between two grilled cheese sandwiches, covered with grilled onions, mushrooms, and thousand island dressing. Of course, if you're looking for a real sports bar, the best place to watch a game would probably be Doolan's Sports Bar & Grill, where you'll find 23 TVs, 13 of which are plasmas, and one 108-inch big screen.

Feeling more upscale? 350 Main specializes in seafood served with an Asian flair. Don't leave without trying the Black Sesame Sea Scallops. Along the same lines, you can find many international cuisines on one block. Kampai is the place to go for Japanese food, and locals flock to this humble establishment for the sushi. Bangkok Thai on Main, just a few steps away, has been hailed as the best Thai in Utah. Go down one block and you'll find Cafe Terigo, a Park City favorite for contemporary European cuisine. On warm days, be sure to get a seat at the small shaded patio. Grappa, located near the bottom of Main Street, where the buildings start looking more residential, is one of the finest restaurants in the city, where patrons can enjoy a glass of wine while sampling the freshest Italian cuisine. Another highly acclaimed restaurant is Chimayo, which serves excellent Southwestern fare in charming rustic surroundings. Meat lovers should head straight to Claim-Jumper Steakhouse or Butcher's Chop House & Bar, where they can satisfy their red meat cravings with thick, juicy cuts of meat, grilled or roasted to perfection. A must-stop destination is Zoom, located in a building that used to be a Union Pacific Depot. Owned by Sundance mogul Robert Redford, this trendy restaurant brings creative cuisine to the base of Park City's historic Main Street.

Prospector Square

The eastern area of Park City between downtown and Kearns Boulevard is known as Prospector Square. The restaurants and eateries out here are good alternatives if you want to avoid the throngs of people flocking to Main Street. Blind Dog, a restaurant which encompasses multiple styles of cuisines, has won awards for their wine list, steaks, and crab cakes. They also have an outstanding sushi bar. Adolph's is a Swiss chalet of sorts, and its cozy exterior, romantic candlelight, and delicious food make it perfect for dinner and drinks after a day on the slopes. Windy Ridge Cafe serves up hearty comfort food in an upscale setting, while Wasatch Bagel Cafe is a good place to go for a quick tasty bite.

Other Areas

Traveling south of downtown to the Deer Valley area, you'll find gems such as Olive Barrel, nestled high in the mountains, or the Goldener Hirsch Restaurant, located in the inn bearing the same name. There they serve European cuisine on fine bone china at carved tables imported from Austria.

No matter where you go in Park City, you're bound to find a restaurant to suit your taste and budget.

Nightlife Insights

Park City is a mecca for both sports and the arts. Host to some of the world's finest skiing as well as a top film festival, there is no lack of things to see and do in this small town nestled among the Wasatch Range in the great Rocky Mountains.

Art

The Kimball Art Center is the heart of the arts in Park City. A non-profit organization, it also has gallery exhibits as well as workshops for children and adults. Once a year for a weekend in August, the Kimball Art Center puts on the Kimball Arts Festival where hundreds of selected artists show off their work in every kind of medium imaginable. The organization is also in charge of the Park City Gallery Stroll held on the last Friday of every month when galleries are open late and free food is provided.

These galleries may include such favorites at the Coda Gallery which shows many types of contemporary art. For more local art, check out the Phoenix Gallery where art from the area adorns the walls.

Film

Home to the Sundance Film Festival which is the largest independent film festival in the United States, Park City is truly the place to be each January for film enthusiasts and celebrities alike. This festival is responsible for bringing to the public eye relatively unknown films such as The Blair Witch Project, Little Miss Sunshine, and Napoleon Dynamite as well as talented directors and actors. Also held in January is the Slamdance Film Festival which aims to show first-time filmmakers' works. The city's film fame has helped several other film festivals crop up including one devoted to film music, the Park City Film Music Festival.

For those times when Park City is not playing host to a film festival, there are several theaters which play Hollywood films year round. The Cinemark Holiday Village 4 and Redstone 8 Cinemas have comfortable seats and the newest blockbusters.

Theater & Dance

The Eccles Center is a high-tech building known to host a variety of acts from around the world as well as local productions. The Egyptian Theatre puts on a selection of shows from both on and off Broadway in a professional environment.

Museums

As you stop by to find out some information for your stay at Park City, don't miss the Park City Museum and Tourist Information Center. Learn about the Park City of yesterday including its rich mining history and the fires that devastated the community. Although not quite a museum, the Family Tree Center allows you to explore your own past and learn about how to unlock your family's past. Truly a store, the Park City Fossils & Gems has a host of wonderful items to peruse, and there is much to be learned in the process. The Alf

Engen Ski Museum, located inside the Utah Olympic Park, has great interactive exhibits and details Engen's life as well as the ski culture of the area.

Music

Especially in the summer, music echoes throughout Park City. It is home to a number of festivals such as the Park City International Music Festival and the Park City International Jazz Festival. Concerts take place at a variety of venues, including outdoors, in galleries, and at the Eccles Center.

During the summer months, try attending a performance that is part of the Local Summer Concert Series featuring artists from the surrounding areas. For music year-round check out Mulligan's Irish Pub for some great ska or jazz music. Or, if you like film as well as music, the Park City Film Music Festival pays particular attention to music as it relates to film.

Food

Although full of exciting cuisine and great places to eat all year, the Park City Food and Wine Classic allows you to taste food and wine from all the finest restaurants.

Sports

Park City is best known for its fabulous skiing and snowboarding facilities. The three main and best known resorts within Park City are Canyons, Deer Valley Resort, and Park City Mountain Resort. All three have excellent ski facilities for both expert and beginners.

Just north of Park City is the Utah Olympic Park, home to many of the 2002 Winter Olympic events. It is still possible to take a ride on the bobsled course, or try your hand at the luge or skeleton by taking an introductory camp. Other winter sports, such as figure skating and ice hockey can be explored at the Park City Ice Arena & Sports Complex. There is even some time on the ice for curling and speed skating.

During the summertime, Park City's rugged terrain makes it a great place for hiking and biking. The Bald Mountain Challenge Downhill Mountain Bike Race and Pedalfest

Cross-Country Mountain Bike Race both are great for mountain biking enthusiasts. The Utah Olympic Park 5K Hill Climb is an uphill battle sure to provide the runner or walker with a sense of accomplishment. Golf is a big sport during the summer at places such as the Park City Golf Club. Or for water-sporting fun and the great outdoors, pay a visit to Jordanelle State Park.

For anyone with a disability, check out the National Abilities Center providing equipment and tours for people of all abilities.

Shopping

If you are looking for some unique items and specialty shops, Main Street is the place to go. Along this street are good reads at Dolly's Bookstore, funky clothing at Bunya Bunya, and stunning jewelry at Park City Jewelers. For great buys from nationally recognized brands, Tanger Outlet Center has great deals and is located just outside the city. With summer comes the Park Silly Sunday Market filled with antiques and food.

Things to Do Insights

Park City is filled with spectacular mountain views and interesting buildings. Although many people visit simply to ride the slopes or get in touch with nature, there are a lot of interesting places to explore within the man-made realm.

Main Street

Truly a sight in itself, Main Street is filled with Victorian buildings and is on the National Register of Historic Places. The cute and artsy downtown area is filled with restaurants, culture, and things to do. For food, check out Robert Redford's Zoom with an American flair. The Red Banjo Pizza Parlour is a cheaper choice with delicious pizzas and has been run for generations by Park City natives. One street over is the Kimball Art Center where you can view great visual arts and gallery exhibits. Curious about your family? Try to find some information on your ancestors at the Family Tree Center. Find cute shoes at Mary Jane's, and if you are lucky enough to be exploring main street on a Sunday in the summer, you will find the Park Silly Sunday Market with food, local artists' work, and antiques.

Utah Olympic Park

If you've ever dreamed of being an Olympic athlete, you can indulge this fantasy by visiting the Utah Olympic Park. With the chance to climb to the top of the ski jump, ride in a bobsled, or experience the luge, you can pretend you are a 2002 Winter Olympian. Also located in this complex is the Alf Engen Ski Museum with interesting exhibits on skiing. For a relaxing treat, make a reservation at Papillion the Spa. To dine with a view, take a gondola at the Canyons and eat at Red Pine.

Kimball Junction

The main attraction at Kimball Junction is the Tanger Outlet Center. After spending time shopping until you feel like dropping, take a break at the Redstone 8 Cinemas with the largest screens in town. Also in the area is the Swaner Nature Preserve which hosts the Swaner Nature Festival. Although the facility is usually for events, there are a number of walks available if you sign up in advance. If you are getting hungry try the Park City Pizza Co or Loco Lizard Cantina.

Heber Valley

Go for a ride through the scenic countryside with Heber Valley Railroad. Just a jaunt from Park City and with its own unique charm, Heber City has great golf, so go for a round at the Homestead Resort or Red Ledges. Stop in for some pie at Hub Cafe or a hearty meal at the Claim Jumper Steak House.

Prospector Square

Prospector Square is a planned business community just off Kearns Boulevard. A fun area to explore, stop off at Wasatch Bagel Cafe for breakfast or lunch for some great New York-style food. Or, if you are looking for something a little more upscale, try Blind Dog with delicious contemporary cuisine including sushi. Want to do something a little more active? The Park City Racquet Club allows visitors and you can choose from a variety of fun classes or just get a great workout on your own. For those with disabilities, the National Abilities Center aims to give everyone a chance to experience sports and has the equipment and the knowledge to do just that.

If you are not into exploring on your own, or if you want a more extreme adventure, Park City has a plethora of guided tours to help you out. Most companies offer more than one type of tour:

Getting Around

Car

Traveling by car is a convenient and easy option for Park City most times of the year. However, during any number of numerous festivals, streets may be closed.

Public Transport

Once in Park City, travel becomes relatively simple. Buses are free for everyone, although the schedule changes depending on the season. They run around Park City itself, and also from the Transit Center to outlying areas of Summit County. A free trolley also runs up and down Main Street daily from 10a-10p.

Foot

Once at your destination, it is easy to explore that area by foot. However, as many points of interest are relatively spread out, to get from area to another, walking will be inefficient.
