Guide Description

AUTHOR NOTE: Some of the items on this list will take you off the beaten path a bit. Take the Way of the Ancients Tour and discover the cultural relevance of the red rocks and learn about the people that inhabited this land for centuries. Travel through history on the Verde Canyon Railroad and see the canyon the way it was experienced decades ago. Other places like Jerome will provide an overview of the mining boom and what happens to a ghost town when it is rekindled by hippies, artists, and friendly motorcycle gangs.

2 Sedona Heritage Museum

OUR LOCAL EXPERT SAYS:

Children under 12 are free at this family-friendly Sedona attraction.

DESCRIPTION: The mission of the Sedona Heritage Museum is to preserve, celebrate, and teach the history of the greater Sedona area from 1876 to the present. The primary museum building was the family home of Walter and Ruth Jordon, with the original one-room building dating back to 1930. Highlights of the Sedona Heritage Museum include a movie room that commemorates nearly 100 feature films made in Sedona, an old-time laundry room, a school room, and a room dedicated to the Schnebly family. The fascinating 3300-square-foot Apple Packing Shed displays Walter Jordan's 46-foot apple grading machine. After you've gotten your fill of Sedona history, head to the gift shop, which features handmade gift items made by local artists.

3 Montezuma's Castle

DESCRIPTION: Visit the ruins of a once-prosperous community of the ancient Sinagua. One of the best-preserved cliff dwellings in North America, the structure boasts five stories and 20 rooms. Inhabited more than 600 years ago, much of the building is still intact. The best time of the year to visit is December and January. Binoculars would be beneficial for a closer view. Walkways are provided and are wheelchair-accessible. Montezuma's Castle and visitor center is located off I-17 at exit 289. Entrance fees are minimal for adults, free for children 16 and under. Allow no less than one hour for your visit. © wcities.com

4 Jerome

DESCRIPTION: This historical township is definitely worth a visit. Originally a mining town for about 70 years, this little community survives on the sliding-edge of a hillside. Through the years, many buildings have taken the fall including, at one point, the town jail. Sporting gorgeous views and lovely bed & breakfasts, the quaint storefronts and small town ambiance attract multitudes of artists, writers and tourists. Shops and galleries flourish here, including Nature's Landscapes. If you have time, visit the Mining Museum. Credit cards and hours will vary by merchant. © wcities.com

5 Fort Verde State Historical Park

DESCRIPTION: Visitors to Northern Arizona's Fort Verde State Historic Park are treated to a first-hand glimpse into life as a frontier soldier. This park is the former base for General Crook's U.S. Army scouts and soldiers, dating back to the 1870s and 1880s. For a fascinating look of a working fort during the tumultuous period of the Indian Wars, Fort Verde State Historic Park offers a strong visual glimpse into the past. Today, the former administration building is the Visitor Center, featuring period artifacts, interpretive displays, and rare insight into the history of the Indian Scouts. Picnic tables, restrooms, and RV parking make this a good stopping point for families and history buffs alike.

6 Tuzigoot National Monument

DESCRIPTION: Crowning a desert hilltop is an ancient pueblo. From a roof top a child scans the desert landscape for the arrival of traders, which are due any day now. What riches will they bring? What stories will they tell? Will all of them return? From the top of the Tuzigoot Pueblo it is easy to imagine such an important moment. Tuzigoot is an ancient village or pueblo built by a culture known as the Sinagua. The pueblo consisted of 110 rooms including second and third story structures. The first buildings were built around A.D. 1000. The Sinagua were agriculturalists with trade connections that spanned hundreds of miles. The people left the area around 1400. The site is currently comprised of 42 acres. Tuzigoot National Monument has much to offer. The visitor center is a small, old-style museum with many artifacts on display. It is one of the few museums interpreting ancient Sinaguan culture in Arizona. The Ruins trail loops around the pueblo and allows visitors to closely view the structures. Two trails are found at Tuzigoot-The Ruins Loop trail and the Tavasci Marsh Overlook trail. Both trails are a quarter of a mile in length. Pets must be on a leash to use any of the trails in the monument. Other hiking opportunities can be found in nearby Sycamore Canyon Wilderness Area, on Mingus Mountain, in Oak Creek Canyon, and at Red Rock State Park. Ask a ranger for directions and more information. Talks and guided tours are offered daily depending on available staff. Junior Ranger Program activity guides are provided on request. Visiting school groups may qualify for a fee waiver; contact the monument for details. Guided tours and talks are offered to organized groups by prior arrangements. Off-site interpretive programs are available to schools within Verde Valley during the winter months. Tuzigoot has no campgrounds. Camping facilities can be found in nearby state parks, national forests, and private campgrounds. The entrance fee is $2.00 per person. Children 16 and younger are free. Golden Eagle Passports are honored. Tuzigoot National Monument is 52 miles south of Flagstaff, Arizona via U.S. Alternate Highway 89A, or 90 miles north of Phoenix. Travel Interstate Highway 17, take Exit 287 and travel west on Highway 260 to Cottonwood. In Cottonwood take Main Street north towards Clarkdale.

Tuzigoot National Monument

Sedona Snapshot

Local Info

You'll never forget the first time you catch a glimpse of Sedona: the earth-colored desert terrain suddenly gives way to a landscape of clay-red fields, giant spires, and natural rock formations, all burnished a mesmerizing orange-red hue. This is Red Rock Country, and there's no where else like it on Earth.

The city of Sedona is one of the top destinations in the Southwestern United States, and it's not difficult to see why. The city, perfectly situated under the southwestern rim of the Colorado Plateau and at the mouth of scenic Oak Creek Canyon, enjoys near-perfect year-round weather characterized by four gentle seasons. In the summer the region becomes a cool weather haven for tourists visiting from the low deserts, and winters are mild, although light snowfall, especially outlying areas, is common.

But the real reason people come to Sedona is for the extraordinary natural beauty of the area. The massive red rock formations of Sedona have become icons of the Southwest, and over the years the region has earned a reputation as a spiritual sanctuary for artists, thinkers, and nature-lovers from around the world. Hiking, bird-watching, and jeep tours are perennial tourist favorites, but lately the city has become the capital of rest and rejuvenation with dozens of spas and resorts catering to visitors from around the world.

Many people make a special pilgrimage to Sedona to soak up the metaphysical vibe of the high desert. In the 1980s, medium and healer Page Bryant coined the term "vortex" to describe highly concentrated energy areas that are especially conducive to healing, mediation, and prayer. Bryant described Sedona as a special place full of highly charged vortexes, a pronouncement that continues to draw positive-minded energy-seekers to the area. Of course, even before Bryant christened Sedona as a vortex capital, it's believed that Sedona was viewed as a special place by Native American tribes who have performed ceremonies in the region for hundreds of years.

Hotel Insights

Sedona's very name has a musical feel, hinting at the magic of this high desert territory with its ethereal red rocks, four mild seasons and kaleidoscope of canyon life.

Spring-fed Oak Creek meanders through stunning rock formations, scenic parks and tree-lined hiking trails. Several days are needed to experience Sedona's natural and spiritual wonders. But where is the perfect pillow under this vast blue sky?

To rope the rustic romance of the Old West, try a bed-and-breakfast inn. Sedona has many award-winning establishments with three and four-diamond ratings from AAA, some of which have been featured on the pages of Arizona Highways magazine. If you prefer a familiar stakeout, Sedona is also home to many popular hotel chains.

Whether you crave a cozy cabin, a three-diamond resort, or modest motel, Sedona has a room with a view where you can hang your hat. Most accommodations can be found in four major areas: Uptown Sedona, Oak Creek Canyon, West Sedona and the Village of Oak Creek, just outside of town.

Uptown Sedona Morning light touches the rooftops of the exclusive country French cottages at L'Auberge de Sedona, where breakfast warms in a lavish European lodge and early risers climb the vine-grown hillside steps toward town. Up the street, coffee brews at the Apple Orchard Inn, where a family gathers around an Indian Pottery waterfall to plan a day of hiking at Red Rock State Park.

Perhaps having celebrated a successful business endeavor the previous evening, guests at the Arroyo Roble Hotel dress quickly, anticipating a picture perfect game on the rolling greens of Sedona Golf Resort. Fellow guests may be hovering outside the adobe walls of Tlaquepaque's artisan village, as shop doors swing open. The bustle and hum of Sedona's colorful shopping and dining district fades to a murmur deeper into the canyon, where towering trees wrap the landscape in a comforting hush.

Oak Creek Canyon Morning stretches like a shadow into Oak Creek Canyon, where guests lounge on a sun-dappled redwood deck at Junipine Resort and listen to the healing songs of the creek.

Deeper in the canyon, a honeymooning couple might emerge from a cabin at Briar Patch Inn to photograph the scenic surroundings. Not far off is Pine Flats Campground, where the forest entices visitors to grab backpacks and go exploring.

West Sedona At the lovely Kokopelli Suites, outdoor enthusiasts may saddle up for an outing with Trail Horse Adventures and return to take a dip in the swimming pool. Tourists looking for less costly accommodations may stop at Days Inn, before packing up their Jeep for an off-road ride. A perfect destination is the prehistoric American Indian pueblo in Walnut Canyon National Monument.

At Boots & Saddles Bed and Breakfast, a cowboy's heart is dressed to the nines in character and comfort. Guests at the popular Best Western relax on the open terrace and watch the light deepen from orange to red.

Village of Oak Creek Guests at the Bell Rock Inn can dine beside a picture window in the on-site restaurant. They will enjoy a weekend packed with outdoor activities and in-room amenities. Visitors at Alma de Sedona step from the comfort of beautifully appointed quarters to watch the moon rise and plan tomorrow's trip to the ruins at Tuzigoot National Monument.

Guests at the Inn on Oak Creek Bed & Breakfast can slip into a two-person Jacuzzi after stargazing. Travelers staying at Poco Diablo Resort can make their way across the green lawn to the on-site restaurant, T. Carl's, which offers sumptuous Southwestern fare and overlooks the golf course.

A short distance away is The Desert Quail Inn, a casual haunt with reasonable room rates.

These four exquisite areas in this exceptional location offer Southwestern comforts and exciting activities. Browse the pages of future memories while planning your own dream vacation in the desert town of Sedona.

Restaurants Insights

Many visitors get energy, rejuvenation and inspiration from Sedona's vortex points, which are swirling forces that are said to give one a sense of well-being and a special spiritual bond to the area. But others not so inclined may find more tangible fulfillment and inner peace from dining. Fortunately, the restaurants in Sedona are as adept at satisfying your appetite as the Red Rocks are at satiating your soul and psyche. From the time you awaken, you're privy to a sensational spectrum of dining options.

The Sedona Swiss Restaurant and Cafe will start your day with melt-in-your-mouth European pastries and specialty coffees. You will be so enamored with the baked goods that you will want to return later for authentic Swiss specialties. Add an early "ole!" to your day with a Sonoran breakfast burrito of eggs and Mexican chorizo at Maria's Restaurant and Cantina. Enjoy an omelet or waffles at the Prime Outlet's Marketplace Cafe. And the hungry-man-sized breakfasts at the Coffee Pot Restaurant will stoke even the sturdiest morning appetites.

While browsing through the shops of Uptown Sedona, there are plenty of great places to lunch. Oaxaca Restaurant & Cantina provides the perfect perch to watch the world go by on Sedona's main street. Rosebud's, diagonally across the street in the Sinagua Plaza, is a Sedona classic. An all-American menu of comfort foods comes with an awe-inspiring panoramic view.

Since hiking, biking and sightseeing are so much a part of the Sedona experience, picnic fare and trail foods are priorities. The area's delis, sandwich shops and bakeries more than meet the challenge. Stop at Sedona Memories, just off the main drag in Uptown, for the often-voted best sandwiches in town. WenDeli's and Jumpin' Jacks, also in the center of the city, provide portable and very palatable choices. On the West Side, Rinzai's Market specializes organic produce, natural foods and baked goods that are nutritious and delicious. And, in Oak Creek Canyon, pick up a snack on your way to Slide Rock State Park at Garland's Indian Gardens, a market and gift shop in the historic 1870s Thompson homestead. Be sure to try the organic apple cider, too!

The west side of Sedona is noted for friendly neighborhood cafés and affordable meals. For dining that's other worldly, there is the Red Planet Diner, replete with eight-foot aliens and a space ship. Order a Jupiter Juice while you wait for your Gemini Double Cheeseburger or EggPlanet Parmigiana. In contrast, the nearby, Spices Restaurant offers a more "Earth-y" atmosphere and comforting, casual cuisine with an Italian accent. Judi's Restaurant and its sibling, Keiser's West, are exactly the kind of home-spun, family-run restaurants that you would hope to find on any trip. Judi's desserts are legendary so be sure you leave room to give them a try. Call it High Desert cuisine, or call it refined ranch food, but you're sure to enjoy a Southwestern-style meal at the Cowboy Club.

The term "harmonic convergence" takes on a whole new meaning when it comes to Sedona dining. Global cuisines are tastily represented here. Both Sasaki and Takashi will pacify your yen for superb Japanese cuisine in sublimely serene surroundings. Thai Spices serves nutrition-packed, chile-charged plates meant to nourish both your health and happiness. New York-style Italian dishes are the specialty at Pietro's, and Dahl and DiLuca's premium handmade pastas are a local favorite. Nobody does Big Apple pizzas like Joey Bistro and get into the spirit of España at Casa Rincon. If it's seafood you fancy, set sail for Shugrue's Hillside Grill. It is regularly voted the area's finest seafood restaurant.

Those fond of French fare will discover some of the southwest's best here in Sedona. Rene's at Tlaquepaque artisan village is the town's hands-down favorite special occasion restaurant. Its elegant setting and impressive artwork is surpassed only by its exquisite interpretations of French cuisine.

For the ultimate al fresco atmosphere, no Sedona dining destination surpasses the L'Auberge Restaurant and its outdoor terrace. You'll be lulled by the flow of Oak Creek and pampered with ultra-accommodating service as you partake of their award-winning wines and an exquisitely prepared and presented six-course prix fixe meal. Heartline Cafe, regularly voted Sedona's most romantic restaurant, has a seductive menu that make it virtually impossible to say no, whether it's to dessert or a marriage proposal.

Diners with transportation and a culinary sense of adventure will find it worth the trip to Junipine Cafe, in picturesque Oak Creek Canyon, for fresh trout. Or chow down on an authentic chuck wagon-style spread, with live entertainment, at Cottonwood's Blazin' M Ranch.

A steaming espresso and a fresh-from-the-oven pastry as the sun rises on another perfect day...a Buffalo burger savored on an Uptown patio while the noonday pedestrians pass by...the lip-puckering lime and salty sting of a well-made Margarita at a classic cowboy bar...an unforgettable epicurean experience at a fine resort, where the food is world-class and the service unsurpassed—these may be the culinary memories of your visit to Sedona. Oh, and do allow yourself some time to gaze at the magnificent Red Rocks, too.

Nightlife Insights

You might imagine that once Sedona's sun sets, it is time to say good night. Think again! The excitement takes on a whole new dimension. Casa Rincon, the Spanish-inspired restaurant and lounge, comes alive with fiery Flamenco entertainment and live bands. Oak Creek Brewing Company and Canyon Breeze are perfect places to toast the Sedona sunset and stay for a meal and music. Billiards is also big, with resort-style recreation at Steaks & Sticks and local, blue collar competition at PJ's Village Pub's Thursday night tournaments. On the west side of town, the Laughing Coyote is a favorite gathering spot for weekend drinking and dancing.

Maybe it's the cosmic forces in action, but at night, Sedona comes alive with special energy. Canyon Breeze is a prime example. Those in pursuit of kinetic energy will find stimulation in the click-clack of billiard balls at Steaks and Sticks, Los Abrigados' posh, yet playful "dining and diversions" venue.

At Poco Diablo Resort, sports enthusiasts can keep up to date on scores at Jersey's Bar & Grill. Or get a taste of Sedona wildlife at West Sedona's Laughing Coyote. Three nights a week the place features a "Howling Hour," the local version of Happy Hour, from 10pm until last call.

Things to Do Insights

With all of Sedona's majestic natural beauty and overall spirit of health and well-being, it's difficult to fight the urge to just sit on your terrace and gaze in awe. But you'd be doing a disservice to yourself and the city if you didn't pursue at least a few of the many recreational, cultural and historical opportunities that abound in the area.

Delve into Sedona's origins at Sedona Heritage Museum, on the original Jordan farmstead. The museum chronicles the city from its pioneering days, through its establishment as an Arizona agricultural center. Many old apple orchard implements are on display. Gain insight into the area's distant past at the Tuzigoot National Monument in nearby Clarkdale. One of the Southwest's most remarkably preserved pueblos, inhabited about a thousand years ago by the Sinagua Indians, the museum contains artifacts from the 110 room ruins. Living geographical history can be seen and explored at Slide Rock State Park, an awesome natural 70-foot-long waterslide you'll long remember. On your way to and from Slide Rock, you will be wowed by the spectacular cliffs and gorges of Oak Creek Canyon. Don't forget your camera! The wonders of Sedona wildlife also abound at Red Rock State Park, a nearly 300-acre riparian refuge and preserve.

Rather enjoy cushy, air-conditioned comfort? Take in the Spirit of Wonder show at the Sedona Super Vue, located at the Prime Factory Outlet Center. This introduction to the area is the ideal way to get your bearings and learn about the area's unique environment and history. West Sedona's Harkins Theatre is the perfect place to catch the latest Hollywood release, or to wait out one of the rare rain or snow storms that turn the Red Rocks to a glistening picture postcard.

The city's newest and most magnificent performing arts venue, Sedona Cultural Park, hosts concerts and theatre events in a stunning outdoor amphitheater. The Georgia Frontiere Outdoor Performance Pavilion is home to the annual Sedona Jazz on the Rocks festival in September and also the site of the Sedona International Film Festival and Workshop each March.

Another local vortex of arts and creativity is known as Tlaquepaque. This gallery, shop and restaurant complex is a tribute to Spanish-style architecture and the spirit and works of Southwestern artists and artisans. Among the many notable galleries and showcases for local talent are AvantGarden, a tiny space filled with eclectic treasures like David Russell's handmade paper musical instruments; Kuivato Gallery, featuring handmade glass sculptures; and Mountain Trails Galleries, representing more than 50 area artists, including the limited-edition bronzes of Scott Rogers. Custom-designed clothing, jewelry and gifts can be found at Call O' The Canyon and The Blue-Eyed Bear.

While you are in a shopping mode, visit the Prime Factory Outlets, just a bit farther south on State Route 179 for great deals on name brand clothing, housewares, books, leather goods and luggage. More than 30 stores including Anne Klein, IZOD, Van Heusen and the Book Warehouse are open daily.

Sedona is all about renewal and rejuvenation. Some folks find their inner peace in the surroundings, others in extreme adventure. However you choose to spend your time here, one thing is guaranteed—this is a city like no other, with an energy that's sure to draw you back often.

Sedona is a tourist haven, spiritually uplifting and incredibly beautiful, and attracts visitors from far-flung locations. Galleries abound, with artwork in various styles to suit diverse tastes. Since the 50s, artists have been attracted to the glorious uprisings of the red rocks. Many fine restaurants and accommodations have sprung up to cater to visitors, as well as guides who share mystical secrets of the surrounding area. Several days are recommended to enjoy the full impact of the area's offerings.

Sedona has long been a spiritual center for personal growth and balance as well as an area possessing rare, naturally occurring energy vortexes. Across the street from Tlaquepaque, you will find ancient wisdom among the services at the Center For the New Age, which touts a "secret" vortex. Many local vortex tours are available that will familiarize you with the specific behaviors of these power sources. Some of these include the Medicine Wheel

Tours, "Spirit Steps" Tours, Way of the Ancients Tours and Earth Wisdom Jeep Tours.

Visitors can also see the beauty of the red rocks from a higher realm, in a fabulous hot air balloon. Coconino National Forest permits a couple of hot air balloon tour groups to offer birds' eye views, including Red Rock Balloon Adventures and Northern Light Balloon Expeditions. Float above the canyon and forests, and then land for a satisfying champagne picnic.

After your date with the wind, delightful hiking tours are offered at Red Rock State Park and Slide Rock State Park, both of which are fee areas. The area also affords connected bicycle paths to provide close encounters with Sedona's beauty. Pick up trail information and a cup of joe at the local Bike & Bean or find local information at Mountain Bike Heaven in Sedona.

Expeditions on four wheels or four legs are also featured in the area, with horseback touring arranged through A Day In The West or Trail Horse Adventures. For a faster ride, grab your hat and hang on, with jeep and 4x4 tours through several tour guides in the area including Earth Wisdom Jeep Tours, Pink Jeep Tours and Red Rock Jeep Tours.

Wherever you choose to spend your precious time, Sedona more than satisfies. Many visitors come away enlightened from their experiences here, and many return. The friendliness of the local people does not diminish with the length of your stay, nor do the rocks ever lose their awe-inspiring magnificence.

Fun Facts

Did You Know? In 1901, T. Carl Schnebly and his wife, Sedona, moved to the fairly unpopulated Arizona area and after complaints from residents that it took too long to get their mail, Schnebly applied for a postal permit under the name "Schnebly Station" and "Oak Creek Crossing." Both names were rejected as they were too long to put on a cancellation stamp, and Schnebly tried again using his wife's name, Sedona, which was approved by postal officials in 1902. Sedona is famous for its Red Rock topography. Its desert locale is a magnet for visitors from around the world looking for unsullied peace, quiet and dry meditative air.
